Introduction

Welcome to Outbound & Inbound rulebook. Here we'll explore the core foundations & first principles of outbound and inbound appointment booking. These are all very straightforward and obvious but you MUST keep them in mind when you come to build your systems.

Outbound Rulebook 📘📕

0. MAIN RULE, #1 ABOVE EVERYTHING, NEVER FORGET: CONSISTENCY.

Consistency. Never, ever stop. It doesn't matter what happens or how you feel.

Come hell or high water, stay consistent.

1. IT'S ALL ABOUT: VOLUME!

Volume is the main thing. When building outreach systems you should constantly be asking yourself 'how can we double the volume' or 'how can we 5x - 10x the volume of this?'

2. IT'S ALL ABOUT: FOLLOWUP!

Followup is the next main thing. Cold, and warm alike. You'll find most of your appointments book after 5-8 follow ups on warm prospects, and most of your replies come on the 2nd or 3rd cold FUP.

3. IT'S ALL ABOUT: RESULT!

Result is the next main thing. NEVER talk about the details of your service or product. ALWAYS talk about the end result. Focus on the solution, the future they want. Never get into the nitty gritty from an outbound perspective.

4. IT'S ALL ABOUT: OFFER!

Offer is the next main thing. It's the biggest needle mover. The best copy is a good offer. You can improve your copy by 10x, and accomplish the same improvement as with a 2x improvement in your offer.

5. POC vs Scale

You can only scale what is proven. Results in outbound are fractal: if you can't book any meetings sending 200 emails or messages, you won't book any sending 200,000.

The first rule of outbound is to establish a proof of concept, once you have that, you can scale.

6. QuanQuality

Don't get locked into thinking you have to send a high volume, low quality message, and likewise don't think you have to send a low quality, high volume message. Do both.

7. Outsource Desperation

Outbound is painful, but you should NOT be desperate to outsource it. VA's & setters are attractive because they alleviate pain, but this is NOT a reason to hire. No-one will care about it and do it like you, so unless you're consistently booking calls, do it yourself.

8. Your Spin (Thinking vs Copying)

People that blindly copy and paste our stuff will struggle. You must add your own spin to everything we teach, even if it's just tweaking it a tiny bit. Do NOT monkey-see, monkey-do.

Use our scripts as models and frameworks that you tweak. Don't blindly copy and paste.

9. Vagueness

Keep your outbound messaging vague, never overshare details (pricing, etc). Curiosity is one of the driving forces of human behaviour. People schedule to learn about your offer and product. If you tell them everything, they'll have less reason to schedule.

Less is more.

10. Outreach Lag

In outbound, the work you do today is the result you get in 2-4 weeks. There is a lag between sending messages/emails/calls and booking calls.

11. Doubt Conditioning

You must condition doubt or fear out of your mind. Whenever you have a thought or a feeling that ‘this isn’t going to work’ or ‘i bet no one will reply’ or similar, you must open your phone/email/tablet and DO MORE OUTREACH. Meet doubt and fear head on with action, even if it’s 3AM.

12. Lead Quality Paradox

Reach out to and schedule everyone, regardless of how qualified they ‘seem’.

Inbound Rulebook 📘📕

1. Long term

Inbound is a long term play. It won’t pay dividends for a long time and can take a year before you really start seeing results or appointments from it.

2. Consistency

Inbound requires monk-like consistency and discipline. Pick a schedule and stick to it. Show up for your audience every week, on time, the same way you’d show up for your children.

3. Value

Inbound is an exchange - value for attention. Your content needs to actually add value and actually solve a problem for people. If it doesn’t, you’re cooked.

If you can’t commit to adding value via inbound systems consistently for at least 12 months, don’t bother with it.

Inbound has the potential to replace outbound and ads for your business, but only if given consistent value exchange over time.

Here’s an equation to explain.

Value x Consistency x Time = Inbound Success
