Building Outbound Systems

Introduction

Welcome to building Outbound Systems. In this quick crash course on Outbound Systems we'll explore the steps to set one up, alongside all the tools and softwares that you can use (for any type of outreach).

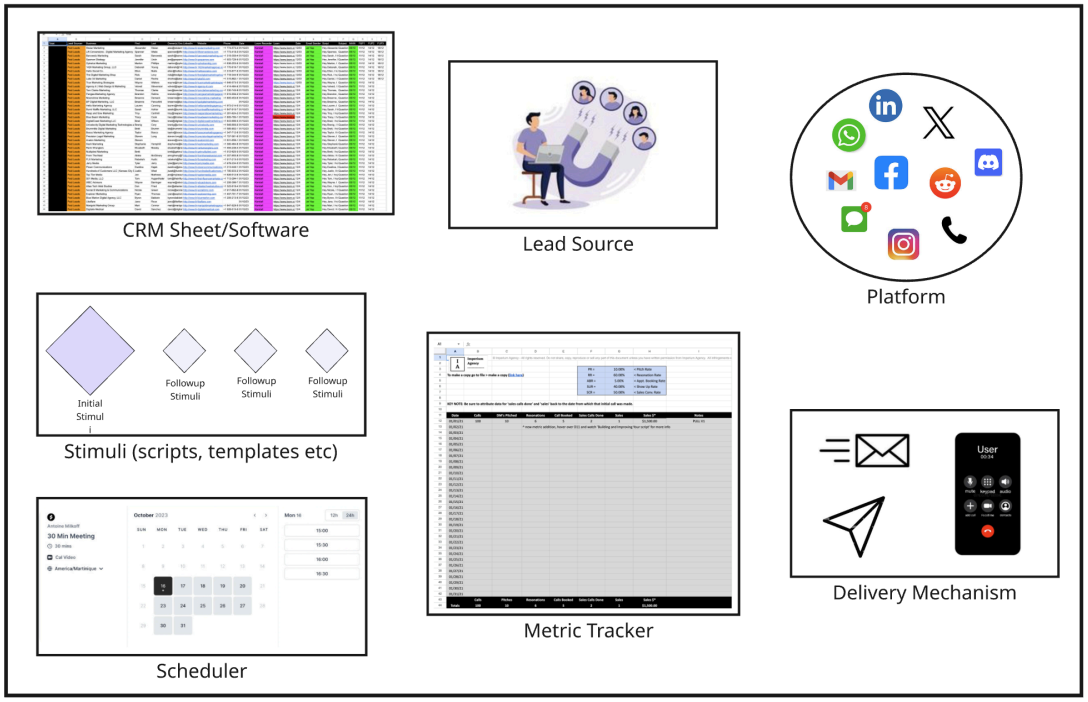

7 Components 🧩♟️

Outbound Systems are structured with 7 components. In order for an Outbound System to perform its function properly it must have all 7.

These are the components (in linear order of what you need to build step by step):

1. Scheduler: scheduling software with an event configured for someone to book a call.
2. Platform: the platform you'll be reaching out to people on (social media, email, call).
3. Stimuli: the scripts, templates & messaging you'll expose to people (initial & FUP).
4. CRM sheet: a spreadsheet used to track all prospects that enter the system.
5. Lead source: the source of your leads - where you get your prospects from.
6. Metric tracker: a spreadsheet used to track all your data in the process.
7. Delivery mechanism: the mechanism you'll use to expose the stimuli.

Building an Outbound System is as simple as just building these 7 things, in order. The quality of the results you get from an Outbound System are determined by how well you set these things up.

Step By Step: Building Outbound Systems 🧱🔨

Okay, so let's get into the building process.

Note: EasyGrow comes with all these components, pre-loaded. As much as I would love to, I can't give them to you here simply because it would be unfair on clients, but I can point you in the right direction and give you the second best thing!

Step 1: Scheduler

1.1: Head over to cal.com - linked here (this link gives you a 20% discount)
1.2: Click 'sign up with Google'
1.3: Select your Google workspace account & enter password
1.4: Allow cal.com all access to your account & calendar
1.5: Make sure your name and timezone are correct
1.6: Connect your calendar (from Google workspace)
1.7: Connect your zoom account (if you don't have one, create one here)
1.8: Set your availability to 12am-11:59PM Mon-Sun (we set availability in Gcal)
1.9: Add a profile photo (should be clear and professional), leave 'about' blank
1.10: Navigate to 'teams' tab & click 'create team'
1.11: Name the team after your company & URL
1.12: Set up a free trial for annual billing (you'll be using this every day, so it's worth saving!)
1.13: Add your profile to the team
1.14: Add a new event type: Title 'Discovery call' | Assignment: collective
1.15: Upload a photo of you to the team profile, leave everything else as it is
1.16: Navigate back to the main cal.com dashboard
1.17: In the bottom corner click 'skip trial'
1.18: Navigate to teams -> appearance -> disable cal.com branding
1.19: Navigate to 'event types' tab and click on your 'team' tab (next to your name)
1.20: Under your team event types tab, click 'new' (click 'create event on team name)
1.21: Title: Discovery Call | Assignment = Collective
1.22: Navigate to 'basics' Description: Video meeting with (Your Name) | Duration: 45 min
1.23: Under 'basics' tab, change location to 'Zoom'
1.24: Under 'availability' tab, enable 'choose a common schedule'
1.25: Make sure the availability is open mon-sun 12am - 11:59pm
1.25: Under 'limits': 3hr min notice | 15 min after event buffer | 60 min time-slot interval
1.26: Under 'advanced' turn on the questions 'name', 'email' and 'phone'
1.27: Set confirmation to 'email'
1.28: Add 3-5 more SIMPLE questions asking about the problem

^ Important: we're not trying to disqualify people with these, just understand. Think: what information is really crucial you have prior to the call (for example, you might ask for their website if they're a business, or if you're an online fitness coach you might ask them what they've tried to do to get fit before). The main thing is the questions should be SIMPLE (one liners) and honestly no more than 5. Less is more, you'll find out all of this information eventually anyway.

1.29: Disable all options at the bottom of the ‘advanced’ page
1.30: Navigate to the ‘workflows’ tab
1.31: Set up email reminders 24hr, 12h & 1hr before using the ‘reminder’ message template
1.32: Set up SMS reminders using the same frequency & template too.
1.33: Bookmark your new team discovery call event! You’ll be sending it a lot!

Step 2: Platform

2.1: Decide right now what is the easiest way to get in touch with your niche
^ where are they most accessible and responsive? Phone? Email? Social DM?.

2.2: If social DM, specifically what platform? LinkedIn? Instagram? Facebook? Etc
^ you only need to pick one platform for now, and just absolutely nail it.

2.3: Create accounts for the platform (email accounts, social accounts etc)
^ create multiple accounts to send as much volume as possible (not applicable for phones).

2.4: Follow any necessary ‘warmup’ protocols for these accounts
^ see YouTube for basic warmup or EasyGrow for advanced warmup (will stop any bans or deliverability issues).

Step 3: Stimuli

3.1: Write out the cold stimuli you’ll use. These are the scripts, templates etc. The messages, the words you’re actually going to use. You should have an initial stimulus (what you expose to the prospect at the start) and then cold followup stimuli (you’ll expose them to this afterwards in a sequence, either by calling them back, messaging them again, emailing again, etc etc.)

^ (refer to Asymmetric Psychological Leverage if you need help here)

^ remember to bear in mind what you learned in Iterative Renaissance. You’re creating a V1 set of stimuli and testing it, looking for proof of concept, etc.

3.2: Write out the warm stimuli you’ll use. These are the templates and scripts you’ll use to follow up on people who have shown interest in your cold stimuli but haven’t booked or engaged with your sales process further.

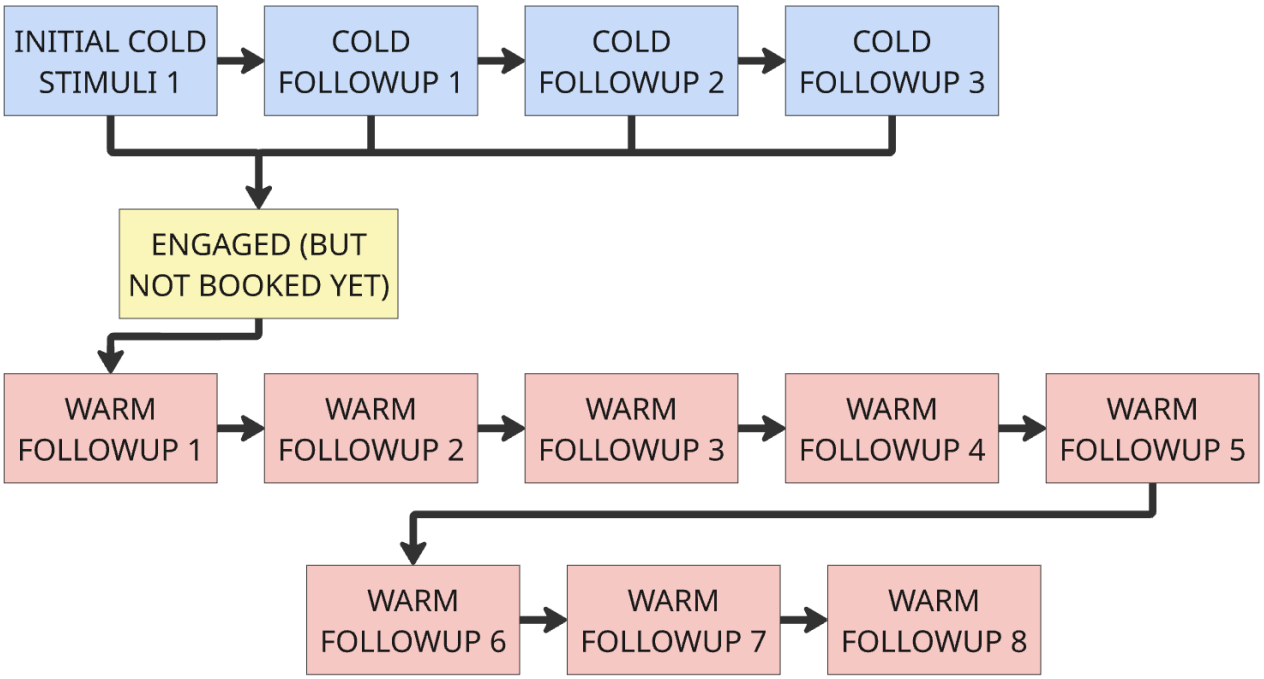

^ not relevant to cold calling, although you will want to call people back who asked you to call back etc.

You might be wondering what the difference is between cold and warm stimuli.

Cold stimuli is stimuli you expose to prospects who are brand new and don't know you (messages, emails, voicenotes, scripts etc) that haven't engaged with you yet - you're reaching out to them dead cold.

Warm stimuli is stimuli you expose to prospects who have replied positively to your cold stimuli but haven't completed a booking just yet - you're reaching back out to them, warm. You'll want to have 7+ warm stimuli in your warm stimuli chain, because it often takes 7+ messages to book a warm prospect in.

Step 4: CRM Sheet

'CRM' stands for customer relationship management. In this context, it's a place where we can manage all our correspondence and work done with prospects.

4.1: Build a sheet with all the variables required to run the system
4.2: Format the sheet (colour code etc)
4.3: Make multiple copies of the worksheet for different months
4.4: Bookmark the sheet so you always have it available

Here's an example for a cold email CRM: Example CRM Sheet

Step 5: Lead Source

Next you need a place to go to find 'leads' (prospects you haven't reached out to yet) to fill this sheet up. Your lead sourcing should be a never ending process, constantly ticking over and filling up the sheet.

5.1: Figure out where you can 'find' prospects the easiest
5.2: Create a workflow (series of actions) that allow you to consistently extract contact info

Here are all the good tools I know of for lead sourcing: Lead Sourcing Tools .

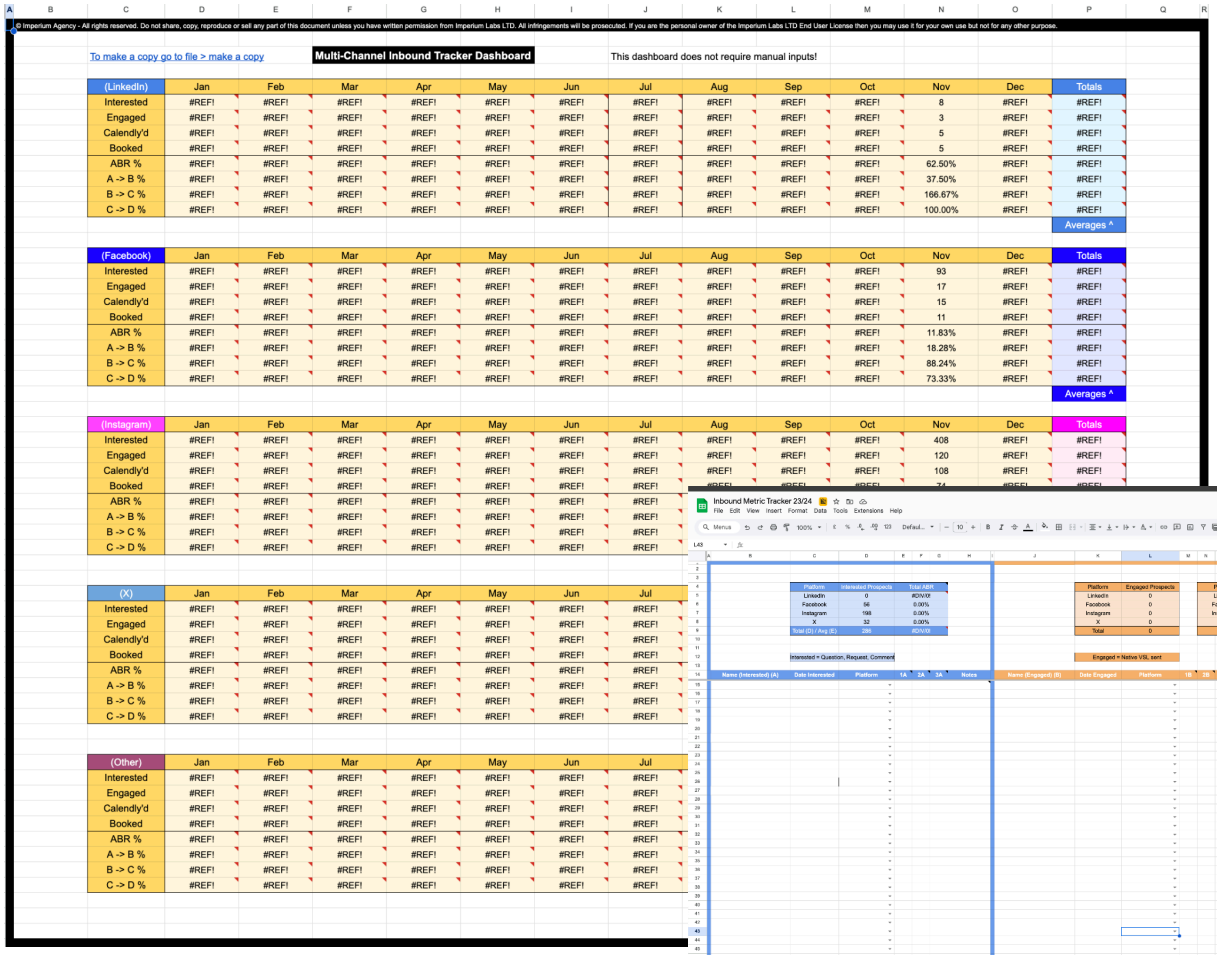

Step 6: Metric Tracker

Now you need to build a spreadsheet dedicated to tracking each stage of conversion in your system. This sheet should calculate conversion rates, contain key performance indicators and be tracked daily!

6.1: Create a spreadsheet and format it to contain each stage of conversion in your process
6.2: Add all the dates of each month, making a new worksheet for each month
6.3: Create a section that auto-calculates conversion rates based on data input
6.4: Format accordingly to your system

Step 7: Delivery Mechanism

Next you need a mechanism to ‘deploy’ or ‘deliver’ your stimuli to your prospects.

This is very straightforward - if you’re making cold calls for example, you can just pick up the phone. However there are lots of cool softwares you can use to automate sending, and make dialling straightforward and cheap.

Check these out (my recommendations): Outreach Delivery Tools

7.1: Decide how you’re going to deploy / deliver your stimuli.

Mad Scientist 🧪🧬

You need to approach this like you are some crazy scientist. The first system you build is unlikely to work. You need to be willing to test dozens and dozens of variable combinations - different delivery mechanisms, different stimuli, different lead sources. There are 7 components and all have a ton of variants. This means there are literally thousands of ways to get clients - and no, you haven’t already ‘tried everything’.

You must get creative and be smart to win. Don’t just build one system, expect it to work and then sit back and stay poor. Get ruthless with building TONS of these systems, try as much as you can, keep it all watertight and tested and scientific and you’ll eventually have a breakthrough.

Lollapalooza Strategy 💥!!

Try your best to combine platforms. Email people, then call them, then send them a social DM. Send them a letter too if you can. Once you find a quality prospect you would be a fit for what you sell, blast them relentlessly and ruthlessly from every single angle. You need to start showing up everywhere in their life! This is called Lollapalooza outreach - where you have a confluence of variables working together in favour of a particular outcome (in this instance, for them to book an appointment). Don’t necessarily think you have to ‘silo’ prospects to just one platform.

Primary, Secondary, Tertiary 🥇🥈

Do NOT rely on one strategy. You want to create Primary, Secondary and Tertiary structures. This means you have:

1. Primary: the best, simplest and easiest way for you to get appointments. This is your primary focus and is the thing that works, that you keep doing, spending most of your time working on and building.

2. Secondary: this is the second best, simplest and easiest way for you to get clients. It might not be as good as the primary, however you run it and work on it because one day your Primary might break, or cease to perform for whatever reason.

3. Tertiary: this is a sub-par or sub-optimal strategy, but still works to a degree. You're refining it, working on it a bit, but it's not your main focus and is just more of a project you work on for fun.

The point here is you CANNOT just rely on 'one method'. You need at least 2-3 good ones that you can execute on and test daily. Get busy, you should never have a 'free' or 'spare' hour. Any time you have spare should be spent building more systems or thinking about how you can improve the current ones you have. At this point in your business setup and journey the ONLY THING YOU SHOULD BE DOING IS TRYING TO GET MORE CLIENTS OR THINKING ABOUT WAYS TO GET MORE CLIENTS. NOTHING ELSE.

Cold Calling Priority 📞📲

Pro tip: if it's appropriate and you can find people's phone numbers in your niche quite easily, do cold calls as your primary method. Trust me, do it. If you have the option to make cold calls (i.e. phone numbers are easily accessible in your niche) then DO THIS. Nothing, and I truly mean this, nothing, comes close to getting results fast and developing your skills as an entrepreneur as fast as cold calling does. It's fucking brilliant. So if you have the option to make cold calls, don't hide behind a keyboard with your DMs or emails. Just dial 12 hours a day 6 days a week and you'll achieve financial freedom in no time flat. This is exactly what I did and is exactly what I'd recommend you do too.
